RUTGERS-NEWARK COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT FELLOWSHIP

The Rutgers-Newark Community Development Fellowship is an initiative being launched by The Graduate School for the Spring semester 2014. It will provide participants with opportunities to explore facets of the field of community development including community economic development, civic engagement, and the arts in community-building.

Participants in this program will be awarded stipends of $1000, pending completion of program requirements.

Program requirements

2. Completion of a 10-15 page research paper on some facet of community development.

3. Development of a group project focusing on some element of community development.

Application process

This fellowship program is open to all Rutgers Newark graduate students (at both the masters and doctoral level). Applicants must supply three items:

1. A one page document (single or double-spaced) providing an overview of your interests in the field of community development. You should also state your academic program and stage in your program.

2. A two-page document (single or double-spaced) providing an overview of a major issue or concern in the area of community development.

3. A copy of a current cv.

All application material must be submitted to Dr. Kyle Farmbry, Acting-Dean, Graduate School – Rutgers Newark by 5:00 PM Friday December 6, 2013. Indicate in the subject line “Application Community Development Fellows.” Dr. Farmbry’s e-mail address for the submission of applications is: kfarmbry@rutgers.edu.

1 This is the tentative date for the Washington, DC trip. Participants will leave Newark on Thursday, March 27 and return on Saturday, March 29.
